RARE SCOTCH WHISKY

This is from The Scotsman newspaper, 10 October 2026, Rosalind Erskine, Food and Drink Editor:

"It has made headlines before, but it's not often that a bottle of The Macallan 1926 Fine & Rare label comes up for sale, but one has again and, once again, it has broken records. During an auction staged by Sotheby's at The Macallan Estate in Speyside, Scotland, a bottle of The Macallan 1926, featuring the Fine & Rare label, sold for £2,125,000 / $2,807,975, becoming second most valuable bottle of whisky ever sold in sterling, but the most valuable bottle ever sold at auction when measured in US dollars. Sotheby's now holds the top three prices for any bottle of whisky sold at auction."

Hmmmmm-if you sold 20 shots from this bottle, you would fetch about $140,000 a shot. I wonder if a side of haggis comes with that order?
